CTM Board of Directors: Director's work high-quality

A letter to the editor

Dear Editor: We would like to correct the impressions left by The Capital Times' choice of words in the story about CTM's decision to suspend the remainder of our season (Jan. 14) and in the Jan. 20 article entitled "Stage Fright." The impression left by the use of the word "fired" in reference to Artistic Director Colin Douglas has left many with the notion that he was terminated for cause.

Mr. Douglas' work speaks for itself. Over the past two seasons he has enabled CTM to produce plays whose quality far exceeded the extremely limited resources the theater could provide, and in the process, won the affection of every cast he worked with.

We are grateful for the dedication Colin has shown to CTM and appreciate your giving us a chance to set the record straight.

Despite the pain which our decision has caused, there is reason for hope. The possibility of losing CTM has reminded all of us how valuable a resource it is, and hundreds of people have come forward to ask what they can do to bring this theater back. We look forward to working with these many volunteers to ensure that CTM Madison Family Theatre can continue its mission for many years to come.
